CO necessary—yet so expensive! Is that your feeling about accessories, pretty teen-ager?

Do you worry even more over cost when it comes to a big "formal" and you want the "full treatment"—a flattering stole, a new evening bag, really glamorous shoes . . . and how do that on the little old allowance?

Of course, accessories ARE important, and you're a bright girl to realise it. For they can make or mor your costume. But they needn't be expensive and even if you're only fairly deft. with needle and thread you can whip up some of the most divine little dress-up gadgets you've ever seen at a cost that amounts practically to pennies. "It's till done with cover-your-own buttons and buckles and, if you don't believe it, take a look at the accessories shown on this page. Take a look at the pictures of that maline stole for instance. It can be worn in four different ways and it's so easy to make. All you have to buy is 11/2 yards of silk maline, a buckle (the 2-1/16" X 1-15/18" size) and a few rhinestones. Cover the buckle with a black velvet tabric (or any other colour, for that matdress (above) in ter) following instructions on the card and sew rhinestones to the face of the buckle, following the pattern shown in Fig. 1. Sew one end of the maline to the buckle and, prestq, you're all set.

Buckled to your left arm, and with the of gold. maline draped over your right arm, you have a stole that's not only flattering, but one that's easy to manage.

No lovely necklace to wear with your newest formal? Don't give it a thought. Buckle the maline about your neck as shown in the photo at top right and you've got not only a necklace, but a stole, tool: And. that's not the end of the stole story. You can wear it as a sash ending in a tremendous pour on your left hip or you can even wear it drawn softly over your hair and buckled under your chin-with the maline tucked into one side of the buckle, creating a one-sided bow.

shortle gloves? Well, here's how you Cover two decorative rounded buttons (size 24 ligne) and one size 30 ligno with a gold slik fabric, following instructions on the card. Sew three 38" red velvet flowers to each of the buttons in a cluster, following the pattern shown on Figure 2.

Now, sew six gold sequins around the edge of the buttons, placing a tiny gold bend in the centre of each sequin.

To finish your ornaments, put a drop of cement on the flat back of your three buttons and a drop of cement on three pln backs. Allow both pieces shout ten seconds to dry, - then set together firmly. Let the completed pins dry for about 2 hours. Then they will be ready for wear. Pin them to your gloves for evening wear! pin to your fabric shoes for special occasions. THERE AREN'T ILL THE MYSTERIES WEDGE IMAGINE

Says MAX FAULKNER

A lot of people seem to think that the Americans are the only golfers able to use the wedge. But don't believe it. Some of them are good but certainly no better than our own top-line people here. Of our regular visitors to England, Bobby Locke is one of the best masters of the diub, with Australia's Von Nida probably even a little more deadly. The way these chaps roll two shots into one by the accuracy of their final pitch to the pin is extraordinary.

Now I am not going to suggest that the handicap player can easily master their astonishing control. That since Holden retired, and his would be foolish. But I do want to assure you that there latest triumph was to shatter aren't all the mysteries in good wedge play that many world record in the Polytech- golfers seem to imagine, and with a little thought and application the average player can make it a valuable stroke-saver.

Americans achieve quite an astonishing amount of check, or back-spin, with it, on their own well-watered greens. Some of them even pitch beyond the pin and bring the ball back.

the general idea is to aim to pitch the ball six or eight yards short so that the momentum will skid the ball up to the hole—this being based on the accepted principle that you never use your wedge from more than 40 or 60 yards from the green. .

First thing to remember about playing this club is that you must be able to control it. That is essential. And you can' expect to buy a wedge and walk straight out on to the course and command it right away. This is a club which demands attention and hard practice. But if you, Ever Go Hunting For Glinks?

-You've Got to Do It While the Moon is Shining-

By MAX TRELL

TT was late at night when Knarf and Hanid, shadow - children with the turned-about names, heard a tap-tap-tap on their window. They cat up. Strangely enough, the room was light.

Not that any of the lamps were on, for everyone in the house was fast alcep. But the moon shone in. And when they looked out of the window, there they saw their friends Jack Straw, the scarecrow, and Willy Toad, both standing in the garden below.

Had Long Stick

It was Jack who was tapping on the window. He had a long

"We haven't got much time," Jack sald. "You can't eatch glinks after the moon goes down. You've got to do it while it's shining."

"Did you bring the soup spoons?" Willy asked. "And the bottles?"

"Yes," answered Hanid. "Here they are. Now would you mind telling us what glinks are?" Jack Straw began: "Glinks

But Willy interrupted. "Tere's no time. You'll see them right away."

Willy started hopping off across the garden, under the fence and down the road. Jack, Knorf and Hanid ran after him as fast as they could go.

Large Rain Puddle

Finally they all reached a large rain puddle.

"Here's where they are," Willy said in a very low, cautious voice.

"Where?" asked Knarf, look- inch balsa wood. ing around for glinks, though he certainly wasn't sure he line of the figure. Then take would recognise them if he saw half a ping-pong ball, fill it

Filled with Them

"Those are the glinks!" cried Willy. "The puddle's filled with them. All right, let's have the soup spoons. Jack and I will dip them out, and you and Knarf hold the bottles so that we can pour them in."

It was a very curious pro-cedure. Willy, with a spoon in his hand, hopped in and out of the puddle, dipping out glinks (or moonbeams, if you like), while Jack Straw, having much longer arms, stood on the edge of the puddle and dipped them out without getting his feet

Soon the bottles, were filled. "Most beautiful things in the world, glinks," Willy remarked TRAWL BROUGHT UP CONTAINED 17 SEA ANEMONES, 61 SEA point today, you must learn to come out of your dream world if D you are to make a material success of your life. Your imagination is so keen, that you spend half your time building castles in the air. If they materialise, innet if they don't, you just go on building some more! You are fond of travel and variety and will want to see most of the world during your lifetime. It may be that you will take a long time to sottle down. During your restless period, your parents will despair.

But the stars have given you artistic talents and if you can decide early what you want to ild in life, your natural cathusiasin will carry you far along the road to success. But you must learn not to scatter your energies too widely or you will be one of those persons capable in many things, but not outstanding in any. Since, for you, mediocrity is hearlbreak, you will only find complete happilness when you are on the top rung of the success ladder.

Although your emotional hature is strong, your hatural tendency is to be reserved with all but your very closest friends. This repression is not good for one of your nature and you must learn to be more frank with yourself, as well as with others, when it comes to the infinite of your affections. When you do full in love, it may be at first slight-aint probably "head over held." Your intuitions will tell you when the right person comes along. Take your happiness lit once lietors you lose it!

TAVER since I saw Marion the dock at Bow Street, I have been wondering what she would say in her next letter to her nusband, who is on a business trip to the United States. The letter might, begin like this:

this has been a ghastly week. The flat has seemed horrible with only me in it, and the other night I went mad or something...."

Marion was charged at Bow Street before Mr Glenn Craske with having used insulting behaviour in the West End the night before. The police said she had pestered men, trying to get acquainted with them. She pleaded guilty.

"I just couldn't stick the flat that night. So I braced myself with a drink and then went out to walk off my gloom in the streets.

"Gosh I was lonely; and every-one else seemed more than life-size happy that night. thought, Til go mad if I don't talk to someone.' Can you imagine, me, who's always been shy of strangers " firthe officer in the witness-A box said to Mr Craske: "She was accosting men, sir. They seemed very annoyed. There are no previous convic-

Marion is a tall, good-looking girl, and she was beautifully dressed; and as she listened of the policeman's story, tears queued in her eyes and channelled one by one through her make-up down her face.

"I didn't say anything, really, just hullo to one or two chaps who looked the sort of people we'd both like. Then the most frightful thing happened. policeman arrested me. He said I'd annoyed these chaps by saying "hullo." I think he thought I was you know what.....

The policeman began to tell other home in the country.

"They took me to Bow Street. and the magistrate was sweet, fatherly, but he thought I was you know what, too, because he said, 'Do you intend to go on with this sort of life, and when I said no, very firmly, he made me go off and see the probation officer, and she gave me advice

THEN the probation officer W brought Marion back, she said to the magistrate: "I can't tell you much more about this girl, sir, except that her husband's away for three months."
The tears now streamed down Marion's checks, along the little canals they had dug through her powder. She took out a squareinch of handkerchief to stem the flow.

"When I went back the magistrate said, 'Is there anything wrong between you and your husband?' I wanted to say, 'No, no, no, nothing except 3,000 miles of ocean,' but I just nodded no instead because my voice wouldn't work.

"Then he said I was discharged conditionally for three months. So I can't say hullo to anyone till you come home, or something like that, so I'll be a sert of Trappist till I meet you at the airport and you can un-scal my lips. Gosh, it was all pretty grim, though.....

WELL, perhaps that is the sort of letter Murion would go home and write. Perhaps. She was in a low state in the dock at Bow Street. Afterwards she may have brightened up. Then the letter would probably egin more like this: "Darling, much news, rather a dreary week, there doesn't seem anything to write about...."
